equality is fundamental without equality — there can be no freedom without freedom — love is not possible without love — peace is unimaginable science tells us at the core of matter nearly equal quarks share energy with one another within every cell organelles work for the common good how we think of equality mirrors the narratives we tell about ourselves the idea of Self-as-separate holds the meaning of equality captive bound by circular chains of signifiers under that master narrative our minds' eye sees the World and Others as Objects precludes inter-subjectivity / denies created equal wonderfully not all alike — but the ego idea turns difference into fields of comparison / competition hierarchy / privilege teaches us to worship winning power over by way of violence often in its train the ego identity's justifications led us down a pathway paved by untenable relationships men over women / lighter colored skin over darker / rich over poor endless wars

poverty / exploitation / oppression loneliness / stress / network disorder now spiraling into ecological disaster equality can open a place / an in-between us where a free response can happen respect appear / grace flourish in less than a nanosecond tell an alternative story about something more going on bring possibility in reach
